

Parachute Beardtongue (Penstemon debilis)

Photo Source: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

03-0514-11

Parachute Beardtongue (Penstemon debilis)

Photo Source: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

03-0514-11

Parachute Beardtongue (Penstemon debilis)

Photo Source: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

03-0514-11

Parachute Beardtongue (Penstemon debilis)

Photo Source: U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

03-0514-11

Parachute Beardtongue
(Penstemon debilis)

Federal status: Proposed* as Threatened
Colorado status: Not listed

This mat-forming perennial herb has thick, bluish leaves and funnel-shaped, pale lavender flowers.

Habitat: This species grows on rocky cliffs above the Colorado River near the town of Parachute, in Garfield County, Colorado. It is found in just two locations that together total less than one-third of a square mile.

* June 23, 2010 Federal Register, p. 35721.

Parachute Beardtongue
(Penstemon debilis)

Federal status: Proposed* as Threatened
Colorado status: Not listed

This mat-forming perennial herb has thick, bluish leaves and funnel-shaped, pale lavender flowers.

Habitat: This species grows on rocky cliffs above the Colorado River near the town of Parachute, in Garfield County, Colorado. It is found in just two locations that together total less than one-third of a square mile.

* June 23, 2010 Federal Register, p. 35721.

Parachute Beardtongue
(Penstemon debilis)

Federal status: Proposed* as Threatened
Colorado status: Not listed

This mat-forming perennial herb has thick, bluish leaves and funnel-shaped, pale lavender flowers.

Habitat: This species grows on rocky cliffs above the Colorado River near the town of Parachute, in Garfield County, Colorado. It is found in just two locations that together total less than one-third of a square mile.

* June 23, 2010 Federal Register, p. 35721.

Parachute Beardtongue
(Penstemon debilis)

Federal status: Proposed* as Threatened
Colorado status: Not listed

This mat-forming perennial herb has thick, bluish leaves and funnel-shaped, pale lavender flowers.

Habitat: This species grows on rocky cliffs above the Colorado River near the town of Parachute, in Garfield County, Colorado. It is found in just two locations that together total less than one-third of a square mile.

* June 23, 2010 Federal Register, p. 35721.

